Greetings,

As Mayor of the City of Newark and a native son, I know that Newark’s extraordinarily rich arts and cultural history has always made it unique. Not only do the arts enhance lives of our citizens and the region at-large, but music, spoken word, literature, visual arts, theatre, film and fashion drive the vibrancy and economy of this City. In fact, collaboration and art is what moves the City forward. As such, it’s important that we find ways to build, enhance, expand and sustain the creative economy in Newark. The Newark Creates Cultural Plan is designed to provide a roadmap for doing that.

I am happy the plan reflects what we can do in every ward, in addition to downtown, to support the arts which improve lives as it enriches our City. Already the City is a critical arts hub and it attracts more artists every year. We intentionally want a plan and the kind of investment that will attract new creatives as we support and build upon the community and grassroots arts organizations that enliven our neighborhoods and fire the imagination of our children.

We look forward to working with all of the partners and communities who convened to develop this plan. We look forward to meaningful discussions and working together to be intentional, equitable and inclusive in executing Newark Creates.

Sincerely,

Ras J. Baraka
Mayor
EXECUTIVE SUMMARY
Newark is bursting at the seams with arts and culture. That indisputable fact will come as no surprise to our residents and visitors.

On any given day or night, the sounds of jazz waft through institutions of learning, clubs, libraries, restaurants, places of worship, radio stations, and performance halls. Newark is a mecca for visual artists, bolstered by the city’s museums, galleries, studios, pop-up shows, myriad festivals, and a growing mural movement. And let’s not forget the city’s active arts education community, comprising hundreds of teaching artists in every possible discipline. Music, film, theater, dance and spoken word all find expression in professional and community settings across the city’s neighborhoods and wards.

With an abundance of arts and culture, it was prescient that, after his 2014 election, Mayor Ras J. Baraka’s transition team recommended the creation of a cultural plan. It has been Newark Arts’ honor to facilitate this plan, named Newark Creates. The plan charts a path to strengthen the city’s artistic core, while using the arts to address social challenges.

Artists have always been a part of Newark’s history. Quite simply this plan reveals that, in order to thrive, Newark must continue to invest in its arts sector. We will enjoy economic, cultural and educational gains by focusing on three areas: adequate funding; sufficient live/work space; and overarching coordination. Combining these three goals will help secure and continue to define Newark as an exciting City of the Arts. Already, Newark has been ranked the 9th most arts-vibrant community in the nation, according to Southern Methodist University’s National Center for Arts Research Report.

Newark Arts, an independent nonprofit organization, was honored to produce this plan on behalf of all Newarkers. The Newark Creates plan was made possible through the generous financial support of Prudential Financial and the technical support of the Geraldine R. Dodge Foundation. A special thank you goes to Mayor’s Office and the hundreds of partners, participants, staff, consultants, and volunteers who worked on the Newark Creates plan.

I look forward to your feedback on Newark Creates and our partnership to activate it.

Sincerely,

Jeremy V. Johnson

WHY NEWARK CREATES

Culture is intrinsic to any city. In Newark the creative arts help to create a sense of place and enliven the spaces where people meet, greet and live. It is the essence of what makes Newark unique. As Newark stands on the cusp of a changing landscape, it also is envisioning what an inclusive cultural community will look like. And, one thing’s for sure—as it invites new residents and businesses in, it must support the dreams and aspirations of those who have been the lifeblood of Newark arts and culture all along.

Newark Creates is the city’s cultural plan as identified as a priority outlined in the then newly-elected Mayor Ras Baraka’s 2014 Transitional Plan. The plan is designed to serve as a roadmap for achieving the end goal of distinguishing Newark as a City of the Arts.

Newark Creates captures the substance of the city’s creative people, neighborhoods, schools, art galleries, places of worship, community centers, and places. It highlights their aspirations for a vibrantly creative community.

Newark Creates strives for equity and diversity in funding and support for artists and creative entrepreneurs who represent the vast cultural heritage of the city.

Newark Creates responds to what artists and arts organizations voiced, while also addressing the needs and aspirations of the city’s residents and partners.

Newark Creates supports a culturally vibrant, flourishing city that has an impact on all Newark artists, residents, and visitors through expanding and deepening participation.

Newark Creates brings together sectors that are fundamental to the city, including, but not limited to business, education, economic development, faith-based, health and wellness, public safety. This collaboration has to support multiple segments of the population – children, youth, working adults, and seniors. Newark Creates, once implemented, will provide solutions, strategies, and capacity to meet the needs of these respective sectors and groups. It’s already informing major discussions about Newark’s creative culture and economy.
WHAT IS NEWARK CREATES

NEWARK CREATES is a collaborative plan, powered by Newark Arts on behalf of the City. It is an organized initiative of community members, nonprofit, for profit, and governmental stakeholders working together to advance equity through the arts. The outcomes of the plan will support civic, social, and economic growth and advance new developments in the creation, production, and availability of arts and culture.

NEWARK CREATES—an 18-month-long cultural planning process—culminated with the report’s preliminary findings in July 2018. The plan’s ultimate findings were vetted with stakeholders in Spring 2019. Currently, certain elements of the plan are underway. The plan engaged community and local stakeholders as recommended by the Mayor’s Arts, Cultural Development and Tourism Transition Committee in the Blueprint for a New Newark. The Blueprint put forth recommendations to:

- Strategize the building of vibrant communities by creating and supporting the arts in neighborhoods;
- Develop a plan for the strategic use of city-owned properties to enrich neighborhoods and drive economic development through the arts;
- Advance the positive branding of Newark through the arts; and
- Maximize the effective use of city parks, libraries, and recreation centers as vibrant venues for arts presentation.
HOW NEWARK CREATES WAS DEVELOPED

A Community-Driven Process

In 2016, Newark Arts was called upon by the City of Newark and major funders to develop a Community Cultural Plan, based on the recommendations set forth by two city planning documents: Newark’s Master Plan (2012) and the Blueprint for a New Newark (2014). While these documents intended to envision the City’s collaborative goals, there had been no formalized effort to design and carry out feasible and actionable solutions. To advance the recommendations,

NEWARK CREATES was designed to be a comprehensive plan to establish Newark as a “City of the Arts” by highlighting, leveraging, and expanding artistic creativity, expression, and cultural experiences among residents, community partners, and visitors; and providing arts-based solutions that contribute to the social, civic, and economic outcomes for Newark.

NEWARK CREATES launched a comprehensive planning process, which resulted in multiple phases: background research and analysis, community engagement and input, and visioning sessions to ultimately draft the Plan. The commencement of Community Conversations began in the Lincoln Park neighborhood; and a synopsis of NEWARK CREATES was unveiled to the public on July 27, 2018, in partnership with the 13th Annual Lincoln Park Music Festival.

The process galvanized neighborhoods, residents, and community involvement, based on values of inclusivity, equity, transparency, and trust. Creating an equitable Cultural Plan means that planning was largely “citizen-centered,” or community determined.

Stakeholder Affinity Group Meetings included but were not limited to artists, art galleries, anchor institutions, businesses, creative tech, development, education, economic development, faith-based, health and wellness, media, public safety, seniors, tourism, and youth. Newark Creates involved a diverse array of community sectors, with the goal of including everyone that will assist in its implementation.

Equity requires the mediating role of listening and co-designing solutions with communities that are not traditionally heard or represented in planning processes, and for cultural planning, this means communities of artists. The process was designed to be accessible, visiting residents in their neighborhoods to engage in dialogue surrounding the future of arts and culture. Participants were asked “What is Culture?” and were tasked with envisioning their community 10 years into the future. Community Conversations concluded with exchange around steps to make their visions a reality.

The public engagement process included:

- 13 Community Conversations
- 15 Stakeholder Affinity Group Meetings
- A Survey of Newark’s Artists
- A Survey of Newark’s Arts and Cultural Organizations
- A Survey of Audiences, Visitors, and Newark Residents
- A Survey on Shared Services for Arts Organizations
“The secret sauce of Newark’s success: collaboration and the arts.”

— Mayor Ras J. Baraka

A Newark Creates outsourced publication that highlights arts and cultural activities monthly.
GOAL 1. FUNDING

Goal 1. Develop a healthy and sustainable arts economy for all Newark artists and arts organizations.

Recommendation 1: A Pooled Investment Fund or Cultural Trust secures a minimum of $5 million per year to arts & cultural activities and the sustainability of arts organizations, galleries, artists, and creative entrepreneurs.

A Pooled Investment or Cultural Fund

Encourage foundations that support the arts in Newark to create a capital-aggregation approach resulting in a pooled fund managed by one of the foundations for their joint support of under-resourced arts organizations. A single, pooled fund makes possible larger and more meaningful grants and streamlines the application and reporting process for organizations that have less staff and capacity to address funder requirements.

Best practices in pooled grants prove that a focus on grants supporting organizational development, professional training, marketing, operational expansion and needed equipment will deeply advance organizational capacity.

Encourage anchor institutions to develop matching support to the pooled grants for Newark organizations that they wish to nurture through an institutional mentoring program. This may include both financial and in-kind matches to the pooled grant fund as well as additional professional development, technical assistance and professional services, marketing, and access to equipment space (i.e. rehearsal space) and materials.

Provide one year and multi-year new grant funds from $10,000 to $100,000 to advance small and mid-sized Newark arts organizations in methods that will enable them to meet and exceed targeted outcomes in capacity, programming, and sustainability. Develop a Newark Creates Fund at a selected NJ Foundation that is designed to support priorities that result from Newark Creates. This will be a renewable fund that individuals, foundations, and businesses can contribute to and will be an enduring grantmaking vehicle.

Catalyst Investments

Catalyst Investments address capital funding needs for the arts in Newark to strengthen the overall ecosystem. This becomes known as the Newark Creates 10-Year Catalyst Fund.

Newark’s creative community needs access to catalyst investors and capital investment to advance their work. This is a multi-faceted need: 1) for major investors in new facilities and upgraded renovated space; 2) for investment in start-up capital for creative entrepreneurs; 3) for investment in the technology and systems required to thrive as arts enterprises.

Capital funds are those that are used for buildings and restoration, as well as neighborhood transformation, housing and workspaces, equipment and technology, and for the building of endowment funds. Capital investment funds are also needed to launch new businesses.

During the 10 years of Newark Creates, capital investment will be sought by institutions and organizations of all sizes for the restoration of essential arts resources/landmark buildings; endowment growth to make possible new services and programs; new facilities including live/work space and work spaces/creative hubs for the arts; and neighborhood arts.

The plan calls for the anchor institutions in Newark to bring together several national funders such as LISC Newark, Ford Foundation, Kresge, Bloomberg, Art Place America, together with leading New Jersey foundations and corporate funders, the City of Newark, and the NYNJ Port Authority, to create a collaborative capital investment strategy that establishes a “Creative Newark Capital Investment Strategy” – hubs, corridors, gateways, housing, work... spaces, and gardens – providing significant lead and matching funding for capitalization ventures, throughout the City. The strategy will identify the total funding needed for the planned capitalization of the arts; will address how the anchor institutions and neighborhoods plan to proceed; and will seek consortia-approached major grants to spur the entire capitalization funding. Insofar as these can have matching requirements; all the organizations and locations involved will benefit from the incentive this offers to their own donors.

Recommendation 2: Newark Creates Professional Leadership Development Pipeline Programs

Leadership Pipeline Programs

Develop an institutional mentoring program and expand shared resources to support capacity of arts organizations. Through joint planning, develop a mentoring skills, services, and systems training program that matches all arts organizations with resources for one year or multi-year mentorships that may provide skills development in areas of operations, planning and financial management, software, systems, marketing, and technical areas. The Newark Museum is participating in a nationwide initiative aimed at diversifying the art museum profession, which can be imitated throughout Newark’s arts ecosystem. The initiative aims to increase the pipeline of diverse students for future leadership positions in the Museum field. Through funding from the Ford Foundation and the Walton Family Foundation, students selected for this three-year paid internship develop a capstone project and are personally mentored by senior leaders.

These programs may provide access to services including joint marketing and may provide access to training to advance the organizations.

Train new and aspiring leaders to work with arts and creative organizations in Newark, as board members, staff leaders, and expert volunteers. Assessing and partnering with existing leadership training offerings available for nonprofits in Newark, develop pipeline training tracks for professional development for individuals including board leadership training, entrepreneurial skills training, and nonprofit management training to individuals in the arts and creative fields. Develop appropriate approaches to shared resources to support individuals and the organizations they represent.

Entrepreneurial Skills Development

Develop a “new and critical skills and services” team of professionals available to work with emerging creative businesses, enabling Newark’s creative entrepreneurs to meet the challenges of launching their enterprises.

Develop a database of interested professionals with knowledge and skills in the “in-demand” fields required to support creative entrepreneurs, including intellectual property/licensing; business plan development; presenting to investors; marketing/getting creative work to market; and business operations.

Provide workshops and one-on-one training opportunities, with training that offers comprehensive business development learning opportunities each year.

Models such as the Blue Meridian Partnership (NYC) of foundations that have agreed to aggregate resources for targeted investment; and the Boston-based VIA investment fund, in creating an investment strategy specific to the arts in Newark.

Draw upon models such as Chicago’s Arts Work Fund, a funder collaborative supported by eleven foundations, to strengthen operations of small and midsized arts organizations, giving grants to organizations with budgets from $50,000 to $800,000.
Recommendation 3: Quarterly Artist Convenings

Develop an informative and supportive series of artist convenings that addresses pressing issues

Artists request support spaces in which their concerns, thoughts, and opportunities can be regularly heard. Similar to professional development models conducted by the Harlem Arts Alliance, the series will strengthen and grow the skills and capacity of the individual artists and arts organizations. The workshops, seminars, and forums are open to individual artists and arts organizations seeking to build their administrative tool kit and improve their effectiveness. The sessions are presented by noted professionals in their respective fields.

Recommendation 4: Shared Services Program

Develop shared services strategies to support the capacity of small and medium-sized arts organizations

A shared service model supports the capacity of all arts organizations. It ensures that resources are spread widely throughout the arts ecosystems, provides administrative expertise for all organizations, stabilizes the organizations, eliminates redundant spending, and provided savings where possible.

Some specific ideas in which shared resources have been utilized includes: 1) development of joint purchasing contracts 2) sharing administrative resources: IT, accounting, marketing: social media, marketing relationships, mailing list constituents 3) sharing in-house counsel 4) grouping of personnel benefits for smaller arts organization (e.g. health insurance, pensions) 5) communal calendar 6) investigating the formation of a PEO 6) a comprehensive resource guide that provides up-to-date professional development resources for arts organizations.

Work to Advance Shared Services

Newark Arts, anchor institutions and local mid- and small-size arts organizations have convened over the past year around building support for Newark’s arts ecosystem, especially via the Newark Creates cultural plan. Some of the discussions focused on the efficiencies and capacity building that local arts organizations could potentially gain via shared services and a committee formed to address that. Newark small, mid-size and large arts groups met with the President and CEO of the Pittsburgh Cultural Trust (PCT) on September 6, 2018, for day-long meetings with arts stakeholders. The Pittsburgh Cultural Trust, considered a world leader in collaboration among arts organizations, is a $66 million (annual) entity that oversees a 14-block cultural arts district. It spearheaded Shared Services for Pittsburgh Cultural District member organizations – Pittsburgh Ballet Theatre, Pittsburgh CLO, Pittsburgh Opera, Pittsburgh Public Theater, and Pittsburgh Symphony Orchestra – to increase efficiencies and revenues as it decreased costs for healthcare, printing, IT, credit-card services and other operational needs.

Newark artists and stakeholders are particularly focused on developing a shared services model that could support more equitable healthcare opportunities for artists and small arts organizations – possibly through pairings with larger arts organization plans, joining associations that offer group insurance or joining unions.

Goal 2. Support artists and arts organizations in neighborhoods to help solve community problems and meet civic challenges through the arts.

Recommendation 1: Online Tool that Tracks Live and Work Spaces for All Artists and Arts Organizations

Make affordable housing sustainable for artists to strengthen Newark as a City of the Arts.

Artists need affordable housing to live and work in Newark. The definition of artists must be broad and inclusive, and the spaces for artists must include strong visibility. Opportunity zones, as well as programs for artist ownership that have been successfully piloted elsewhere need to be brought to Newark to build the presence of artists and the City’s reputation as a City of the Arts. Partner with major developers across Newark to create more sustainable, affordable artist housing. As the retail industry slowly diminishes, spaces will become available for use and can be used by artists of all disciplines, turning this space into combined live/work space. Create an online system to match an inventory of artists and space availability. Similarly, marry arts programming with development processes, as art enhances land value and arts programming is a valuable asset to new spaces. Follow examples such as En Garde Arts, which partners the arts and real estate. Incorporating arts programming in new spaces and artists as tenants will in turn create a positive community culture.

Recommendation 2: Newark Creates Neighborhood Fund to raise a minimum of $5 million per year to support community needs and activate creative hubs.

These are hubs for residents of all ages to engage in art, to hear and learn, and to make art. These are hubs called for by plan participants who seek family and child-safe venues that build neighborhoods. These hubs may also involve University partnerships, offering connections between the University and neighborhoods through arts engagement.

Funding streams will be generated through the following existing models, 1) Investment in the newly launched Neighbors helping Neighborhoods small grants program in Fairmount Heights and Clinton Hills communities to leverage the existing infrastructure established to disseminate grants. 2) Expansion of the ArtStart Grant Program to include additional cycles and larger grants, building upon the reputation of the existing program and leading to more impact and larger projects. 3) Expansion of Newark Arts’ PARTNER grants to jump-start projects that emerge from Newark Creates and establish these as the beginning of longer term grants.

Recommendation 3: 75% of Newark Students Pre-K-16 to have access to a partnership opportunity with a Newark arts organization.

Support Newark Arts Education Roundtable (NAER), a cross-sector collaborative whose mission is to ensure that all Newark children have equitable access to high quality, sequential arts education opportunities in and out of school, and other networks in the support of arts education for all Newark Students Pre-K-16. Newark’s arts organizations and artists provide a wide menu of outstanding partnerships with Newark Public Schools. Power collaborations such as NAER and the VH1 Save the Music Foundation, which provided musical instruments to 7 Newark public schools to jumpstart and sustain their music education programs. Leveraging the remarkable work of NAER, Newark Creates will communicate funding opportunities that support arts education to NAER and other networks supporting youth; and engage cross-sector partners to ensure that arts education remains and increases as a priority in Newark.

EX 2: Downtown Arts District: Proposed Pop-Up Exhibits in Vacant Retail Spaces
Goal 3. Develop and communicate Newark’s brand as a foremost City of Arts and Culture that embraces its unique history, extraordinary diversity, spirit of innovation, and leverages its distinctive assets.

 Recommendation 1: State of the arts multi-lingual online site with comprehensive events calendar, links to all Newark arts, newsletter and blog, information source for all organizations, artists, and creative entrepreneurs.

Newark’s creative community and its residents both told Newark Creates that the number one barrier to increased arts participation and the top issue for an artist performing or showing work in Newark is lack of a consolidated and comprehensive site as the go-to for all information: events schedule and links to ticket sites; information on artists and their work; information on opportunities and grants for creative organizations; meetings and agendas, and more.

Newark Creates Partners – within the arts and our partners in the City, in tourism, and in neighborhoods, will establish a site such as ArtsNowRI from Providence, RI. Many elements of this are already used in Newark: Newark Arts’ website includes an arts events calendar, as does WGBO and Newark Happening. Combining all efforts into a comprehensive initiative will advance the arts and build a depth of awareness and involvement throughout the arts community and their audiences.

Newark is known worldwide for its music. The region is a powerful arts destination for the performing arts. Within the art world, the Newark arts community is known for the richness of its artistic work. These assets should be messaged into a brand that is consistently used to market Newark and its creativity.

Use the full range of Newark’s creative asset base in shaping Newark’s creative brand, including its artists, its temporary and permanent public art, its diverse arts organizations and its anchor institutions. Define how the City’s largest businesses count upon Newark arts to attract employees. Consistently convey the economic and social value of the arts in Newark through economic studies, participation mapping, and other tools that share the story.

 Recommendation 2: A Newark Creates publication that highlights arts and cultural activities quarterly.

Newark Creates is not only a brand but a slogan of arts and cultural progression throughout the city of Newark. The Newark Creates newsletter will highlight the city’s arts and cultural activities and opportunities. It encompasses the beautification of parks, mural displays, and performances within neighborhoods.

NEWARK’S VIBRANT HISTORY, CHALLENGES AND RETURN

After the end of World War I, Newark, New Jersey, America’s third-oldest city, was a dynamic, bustling metropolis, growing in population with the descendants of the City’s founders, European and Caribbean immigrants and African Americans migrating from the South.

Newark has a rich past of immigration and influences from legions of Germans, Irish, Jewish, Italians and other European groups in the early to mid 20th Century. Demographics shifted dramatically with the Great Migration of African Americans following World War II. Large influxes of Portuguese, Latin and South American immigrants impacted the city’s cultural terrain during the latter 20th and early 21st century. Further diversity is reflective of growing African and Caribbean communities in recent years.

Newark streets, and those adjacent throughout the five wards, were corridors of retail stores, manufacturing plants, businesses, theaters, night clubs and after-hour joints. An energetic nightlife dominated the City with frequent visits to the Newark clubs that included jazz greats such as Billie Holiday, Dizzy Gillespie, Jackie Gleason and Frank Sinatra, not to mention the ever-present influence of Newark natives Sarah Vaughan and Willie “The Lion” Smith.

Even though Newark is one of the nation’s major air, shipping, and rail hubs, Newark is susceptible to economic downturns like the rest of the country. During the mid-20th Century, the African-American population increased dramatically with families migrating from the South looking for better opportunities as well as poor immigrants from Europe fleeing World War II and the imminent “Cold War.” Because of racial tensions between the African-American community and the predominately white city government and police force, Newark experienced one of the dozen or more urban rebellions of the 1960s. The economically stable middle class, of all races, began to flee the city, taking with them the rudiments of development and economic empowerment.

Today the City has a radically new energy. After years of effort by successive mayors, - the late Kenneth Gibson, Sharpe James and Senator Cory Booker, the current mayor Ras Baraka – real estate development, economic development education, tourism and the arts are booming. The opening of the New Jersey Performing Arts Center in 1997 marked a turning point. Some $197 million in public-private investments went toward the first phase building on an 11-acre site, as the centerpiece of a new downtown arts district.

According to a 2018 study by Southern Methodist University, Newark is now pronounced as the nation’s ninth most arts-vibrant community. The arts have played a significant role in the city’s revitalization, attracting artists and creatives of all disciplines because of the reception and respect of their talents by the community.

“We want progressives, artists to come out here. Newark should be the place to be for artists. And, I want Newarkers to benefit from their presence,” proclaims Mayor Baraka, who was recently reelected to his second term in office.
NEWARK’S VIBRANT HISTORY, CHALLENGES AND RETURN

According to Americans for the Arts, Newark accounts for one-third of all dollars spent by organizations and audiences in the nonprofit arts sector in New Jersey. Through the years the state’s largest museum, The Newark Museum, as well as the state’s consummate collection of information, the Newark Public Library, have continually had active programs spreading the arts and culture throughout the city and surrounding area. Arts education has always been an integral part of the city with Newark being the first public school system in the United States to establish a high school whose primary purpose was to educate students in music and fine art. Adding to the cultural life has been the development of the large presenters as the New Jersey Performing Arts Center, the Prudential Center, and the smaller ones like art galleries, artists spaces, and community arts and performance schools.

Several years ago, the Newark Downtown District, a non-profit corporation whose mission is to revitalize the City’s commercial area, engaged 17 local and international artists to create a mural stretching 1.39 miles, the longest on the eastern coast of the United States. Numerous murals have adorned many buildings in Newark.

Newark is saturated with festivals all year long that celebrate the City’s numerous cultures and populations, including the Cherry Blossom Festival in Branch Brook Park, the nation’s largest collection of cherry blossoms.

Revitalization efforts are strong as the city continues its immense growth. The arts are alive and support the City as it regains its dynamism from the last century and powers it forward. In turn, the City welcomes the creatives and their art.

Combined, these meetings along with surveys of residents, artists, and organizations ensured that thousands of voices were heard and are represented in this plan. Hundreds of people joined together to shape a vision, mission, and priorities for the future. This plan belongs to all of Newark.

meetings were shaped using the core principles of “appreciative inquiry” – listening and responding that honored every voice and steeped in a collective impact framework to tackle complex social problems by collaborating across sectors. This approach has been successfully employed widely throughout Newark.

The use of collective impact not only shaped the planning process: it will shape the plan’s implementation.

* No one party or organization can or should be the only one to fully implement the ambitious goals and aggressive timeline called for in this plan; instead, through its extensive convenings and dialogue, the planning process forged new collaborations with shared interests. These collaborations will continue as the implementation mechanisms to insure the plan is fully achieved.
